The events, conversations, and circumstances described in this book have been recreated to the best of the author's knowledge and belief. Some dialogue has been reconstructed from memory and may not represent word-for-word transcripts of what was said, but faithfully reflects the essence of those exchanges as the author experienced and understood them.

The names of certain individuals have been used with their knowledge, while others appear only by first name, initials, or professional title to protect their privacy. Any resemblance to persons not intentionally identified is coincidental.
